CLARKSVILLE (SUNRISE) ROTARY CLUB
HISTORY

COMPILED BY

Richard "Titch" Harrison

May 18, 1990, the Clarksville Rotary Club (Coloquially known as the "Noon Club") established a new morning club called Clarksville (Sunrise) Rotary Club. The "Noon Club" had arisen in 1917, only twelve years after Rotary began. A committee from the "Noon Club", Darol Walker (Chairman), Thomas Burney, Bill Harpel Allan Williams and William Ellis served as faciliators. Ellis served as the then District Governor's personal representative in the establishment of the breakfast club. Nine members transferred to the new "Morning Club". Twentyone other recruits made up the total original membership.

CAPSULE HISTORY OF ROTARY INTERNATIONAL

One of the (Sunrise) new comers (Exhibit #3) had attended the original Chicago Rotary Club (Now called Rotary/One) throughout the Rotary year 1944-45. He had conversations with the founder, Paul Harris. (Although, forty-nine years apart in age, they were introduced in Rotary's first name or nickname custom.) The member's most vivid impression of the founder lay in Paul's unique trait of making his co-conversationalist feel as the center of the universe. By 1944, Paul had become too frail for regular attendance, as urged in the Rotary Rules.

January 1911, Paul wrote in the original issue of the organization's magazine, The National Rotarian, (Now The Rotarian) the first thing I expect of a Rotarian is "tolerance". "Honesty" came in a very close second.

Tri-Cities 1909 3 (Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda)
Seattle The Rotary movement started 23 February 1905, when Chicago Lawyer Paul Harris invited three friends (mining engineer Gustavus Loerh, whose recreated office resides on the 16th floor RI Headquarters, coal merchant Silvester Schiele and tailor Hiram Shorey) to an office lunch. Thereafter, they rotated around among the various offices on a weekly basis.

St. Paul 1910 10
St. Louis The group expanded rapidly. Soon other cities organized. San Francisco started a club in 1908 only three years later. Word has it, a railroad man joined early. He started clubs along his travels.

Portland, Or. 1910 15
Detroit By 1910, sixteen cities had Rotary Clubs. That year, Rotary (National) convened its first convention with 60 attendees, run by Chicagoan Herb Angster. Herb's daughter Mimi Altman served as one of the first eight women RI District Governors 1995-1996. Paul Harris held the presidency from 1910 to 1912. In 1912, two Canadian and one British club joined. All of that indicated the outstanding personality of Paul Harris.

Hartford, Conn. 1911 23
Salt Lake By 1910, Rotary had evolved into the first Service Club. Now, a number of others such as Kiwanis, Altrusa, Civitan, among others, have organized. Today, (30 June 2002) Rotary has 30,149 clubs with 1,188,492 members in 162 countries. An outdated policy of allowing only two members of a business or professional category per club limits the numbers. July of 2001, the rules changed. The new policy allows up to five members in the same category or a maximum of ten percent. All members now hold either "active" or "honorary" memberships.
